

Short BIO for Dr. Adrian McCullagh

Dr McCullagh has degrees in Computer Science, Law (Honours) and a Ph.D. in Trusted Systems and Digital Signature technology. He is an adjunct professor at the Information Security Institute at QUT for 3 days per week in Telecommunications and Secure Electronic Business Law. The remainder of the time he is special counsel for the National Law Firm of Phillips Fox in Telecommunications Law and IT contracting.

Adrian has published academic papers in Australia, the USA and the UK. His current research interests are regulatory issues regarding Voice Over IP Technology, Digital Rights Management, Cryptography and Digital Signature technology as well IT Security Governance and Management.

Adrian provides strategic and practical advice to large corporations (ASX top 200 and multi-national) and Government agencies (foreign as well as domestic) in IT Governance, Corporate Governance, Electronic Contracting policy frameworks, Telecommunications Law, GITC Contracts and Technology Outsourcing contracts, and Evolutionary Acquisition Contracts.

He is a national board member of the Australian Telecommunications Users Group, a director of ILAB Pty Ltd which is a Qld Government held company that operates a technology business incubation service. He is also a director WebRaven Pty. Ltd. which is a world leader in electronic learning management technology and legal governance & compliance software.